No Moratorium On Enforcing City Zoning Law

Carmel Council Clarifies Its Position In Zoning Law Controversy In Written Statement To Pine Cone

The members of the Carmel City Council at an informal meeting held Tuesday, August 16, in the Council Chambers, authorized the following statement to the press:

"The Carmel City Council has noted the increasing pressures from many quarters urging the Council to take the initiative in proposing an increase in the permissible number of paying guests in a home in the residential zone of Carmel, and to suspend enforcement of the existing ordinance pending its 'liberalization' in the future.

"Of course, we have been acutely aware, both as a public body and as individual citizens of Carmel, that there have been recent expressions of opinion by a group of our residents critical of the 'three in a house' law as it now stands in our Ordinance Code. Another group of residents have been equally zealous in defense of the ordinance in its present form.

"But we believe that the Carmel City Council can best serve the public interest in this matter by maintaining an impartial and unbiased attitude of mind pending clarification of public sentiment on the major issues of the controversy. In this connection we should note that Section 1015 of our Ordinance Code provides for public hearings before the City Planning Commission on any proposed amendments to the Zoning Law, and further states that this Council cannot enact an amending ordinance unless and until the City Planning Commission has held public hearing and has made its recommendation to the Council on the matter. After the opposing points of view have been thoroughly aired before the City Planning Commission, and after that conscientious group has made their recommendation based upon the evidence presented to them at the hearing by parties representing all points of view, the City Council would be in a better position to render a final decision based on a correct appraisal of public sentiment and the protection of the true public welfare than if it had previously identified itself with the one side or the other.

"The mere statement of the second suggestion (that the Council suspend enforcement of the exist-

Monterey And The Convention Of 1849

BY J. WILLIAM MAC LENNAN
CHAPTER IV

The constitutional convention held in Monterey, September 1-13, precipitated a crisis in the East. California wanted to enter the union as a free state. If admitted, her two senators would upset the balance of power in the Senate, at that time about evenly balanced between the North and the South. Secession was threatened, and it took the combined persuasive powers of Clay, Calhoun, Douglas, and Webster to pass the "Compromise of 1850," and to prevent civil war for the time being. California was admitted as a free state, but to placate the South the compromise included among its provisions a strong fugitive slave law which compelled officials all over the country to return runaway slaves and to prosecute people harboring them. This law drove hundreds of leading citizens in the North into the ranks of the Abolitionists. Amongst these was Ralph Waldo Emerson, who immediately set about having a secret room built in his attic to hide slaves until they could be moved safely on to the next station of the "Underground Railroad" leading to Canada and freedom.

It was Brigadier General Riley who precipitated this crisis. He arrived at Monterey, April 12, 1849, to take over from Col. Mason the government of the conquered province of Upper California until Congress should decide what to do with it. Riley saw very soon that because of the great influx of outsiders if order was to be maintained and life and property protected the immediate organization of a state government with authority to act promptly and decisively was vitally necessary.

Even before the gold rush, and particularly after the American flag was raised on the Custom House at Monterey on July 7, 1846, Americans had been coming in increasing numbers over the Sierra Nevada mountains seeking homesteads. These immigrants were land hungry. They talked about "Manifest Destiny," claiming that God had foreordained that Americans (meaning themselves) should possess this land. They seemed to think they were God's chosen people, and spoke of the Californians as Hittites, Hivites, and Jebusites. Leaving their families at Sacramento they marched out with guns on their shoulders as American volunteers to win the "Promised Land" and to despoil the "gentiles." They were often a lawless group, with little consideration for the property rights of the Californians, and they were hard to manage.

This difficulty was increased manifold by the discovery of gold at Coloma, January 24, 1848. Before that year was out men from all over California, from Mexico, from many parts of the Pacific world, men without family ties to restrain them, were moving like a tidal wave on to the gold fields; and early the next year they were joined by Americans coming from the Atlantic Coast by way of the Isthmus of Panama.

The steamer California carrying the first contingent of these Argonauts put into Monterey on February 24, with her coal bumpers practically empty. While the crew

Board Holds Over Stanton Use Permit For Sept. Meeting

After lengthy discussion, the Planning Commission, sitting as a board of adjustments, held over until the September meeting final decision in the application of Virginia Stanton for a use permit to continue to use the Normandy Cottages for hotel, apartment house and lodging house purposes.

Mrs. Stanton's father-in-law, Robert Stanton, Sr., was tried last month, and acquitted, on charges of operating these same cottages in violation of the zoning ordinances that restricts the number of lodgers to three on one lot in

C. M. Goethe Knew Muir, Mather, Instigated The Ranger Naturalist System In Our National Parks

C. M. Goethe, naturalist, author, and authority on early place names and history of the California gold fields, is visiting Point Lobos Reserve on his annual vacation here, studying the prolific flora and fauna on the reserve.

Mr. Goethe comes of forbears whose gold mining activities enriched the boy's early life with traditions of the gold fields and exposed him at an early age to the study of nature. His grandfather, a college professor who migrated to Australia, was active in defending the rights of the Cornish miners in Australia's gold mines. H. J. Goethe, father to C. M. Goethe, was not strong as a boy, so his father sent him to the Australian Alps under the care of an aborigine into the bush to get his living with his own boomerang. Goethe says his father came back with a magnificent physique and a knowledge of natural history that he communicated to his

CLASSY DOUBLEHEADER AT SUNSET FIELD SATURDAY NIGHT

The formidable Don Castros are coming to town tomorrow night to match softball talent with the Carmel Pine Cone aggregation in a Bay League finale. The Dons have met defeat only once this year and are anxious to preserve their near-perfect record, while the Pine Cone is determined to end the league season with a win over the Salinas champs. Castroville has dominated the play in the neophyte Bay League this season and has handled outside opposition without too much difficulty. Featuring two class double A hurlers, Whitey Moore and Bob Smick, the artichoke growers have plenty of softball savvy to throw at the opponents. The Pine Cone has had an up-and-down season, flashes of brilliance mixed in with the other type. However, a win over the Dons would make it a good season for the printers. The Don-Pine Cone clash will get under way at 7:45.

In tomorrow night's second clash, the scrappy Wilder & Jones nine will meet the equally scrappy Leon Terry team from San Jose. The Terry team played under the banner of the Sunnyvale Tavern last year, and Carmel fans will remember their aggressive tactics on the softball field.

W&J DROP THRILLER TO SALINAS 20-30 CLUB

Unable to solve the southpaw slants of Jack Lester when a scoring opportunity presented itself, the Wilder & Jones nine lost a 1-0 dandy to the well-balanced Salinas 20-30 Club last Monday night at Sunset. The Salinas portside threw a one-hitter at Jim Hale's crew and sent an even dozen to the bench via the strikeout route. Clyde Walked assayed the hurling chores for the plumbers and pitched his usual good game, but had the misfortune to run into Lester at his best. Clyde gave up three hits and showed exceptional control by not walking a single batter. The locals had a fine opportunity to dent the platter in the fifth heat when Louie Saunders rapped a double, advanced to third on a fielder's choice. At this point, daring Louie attempted to steal home on a short passed ball and was thrown out by a country mile. The 20-30's put their marker on the board in the fifth frame by joining a brace of singles for an earned run.

Next outing for the plumbers will be at Watsonville tonight when they tangle with the Massera All-Stars. A win for W&J will give them a solid third place in final league standings.

MOST SUMMER RECREATION ACTIVITIES TERMINATE TODAY

In order to give maintenance men an opportunity to prepare the buildings for opening of school, most of the summer recreation activities will end with today's program.

The Sunset playground and game room will close after today's activities, badminton will terminate at the high school, folk dancing discontinues until opening of school on September 12, and men's volleyball at Sunset is finished until September 12.

Monday morning, August 22, will be the final performance of the popular Hildebrand Puppet Show at the Sunset Cafeteria. Teen age dancing at the Legion Hall will end with a semi-formal session on Wednesday, August 24. There will be an orchestra on hand for this final dance.

Morning swim classes finish on Friday, August 26, but the pool will be open in the afternoons until September 11. On Wednesday, August 24, at 2 p. m., a swimming meet will be run off for Carmel youngsters. Pattern swimming, races, life-saving demonstrations, and diving will be featured during this meet.

PINE CONE DROPS CLOSE ONE TO SALINAS 526 CLUB

Stymied by Garcia's 16-strike-out pitching the Pine Cone softball nine dropped a 2-1 decision to the Salinas 526 Club at Castroville last Saturday night. The Pine Cone had several chances to snatch the victory but inability to hit in the clutch tilted the outcome toward the Salinas Clubbers.

After a shaky first inning, Ky Miyamoto matched Garcia pitch for pitch and with a little more bat support could have salvaged the contest. Ky sent 14 swingers back to the bench via the K route and gave up four hits.

Loss to the 526 Club eliminates the Pine Cone from any possible chance of coping the second half of the Bay League, but they have a chance to be spoilers for the Castroville Dons when they meet tomorrow night. If the printers can get over the Dons, it will give Wilder & Jones and the Sports a chance to tie Castroville for second half honors.

CRICKET CLUB

In the Sunday cricket match between the Golden Gate cricket club and the Del Monte cricket club, the Berkeley team emerged winner with 246 for 9 wickets to Del Monte's 125. High man of the game was Desmond Surfleet of the Golden Gate team, who retired with a score of 110. The two highest scorers for Del Monte were George Calvert, 44, and John Tyler 39. The next match will be held next Sunday when Del Monte will travel to San Mateo to meet the San Francisco cricket club.

UPDIKE LEADING HITTER IN CARMEL KIDS' LEAGUE

Lashing enemy pitching for a neat .466 average, Bob Updike, sensational Boys' Club shortstop, topped all the hitters in the recently completed kids' summer softball league. Bob not only wielded a potent willow for the Boys' Club, he also turned in a steady job of handling the difficult shortstop duties. Don Canham, rifle-arm catcher for the Carmel CYO, pressed close on Updike's heels by belting a good .461. In third place, with .429, was Lawrence Segovia of the New Monterey Boys' Club. This lad played some brilliant ball for Nicky Albert's crew and was an important factor in their runner-up standing in the league. Bob Black, most improved player in the league, sported a neat .400 average for his efforts to wind up in fourth place. Another New Monterey boy, Al Cardoza finished the season with a .351 average, good enough for fifth place.

NEW MONTEREY BOYS' CLUB DOMINATING BOYS' TOURNEY

Nicky Albert's fine little band of softball performers, playing under the banner of the New Monterey Boys' Club, continue to show the way to the rest of the entrants in the Carmel Boys' Tournament. In defeating Castroville, 1 to 0, and stopping the Carmel Boys' Club, 6 to 2, the New Monterey boys enjoy the distinction of being the only undefeated team left in the tourney. The Castroville game was one of the best played at Sunset all season. A terrific pitching duel between Chubby Moore for Castroville and Charley Higuera for New Monterey was decided in the first inning (Continued on Page Four)

Dr. Van Meter Predicts Best Flower Show Yet

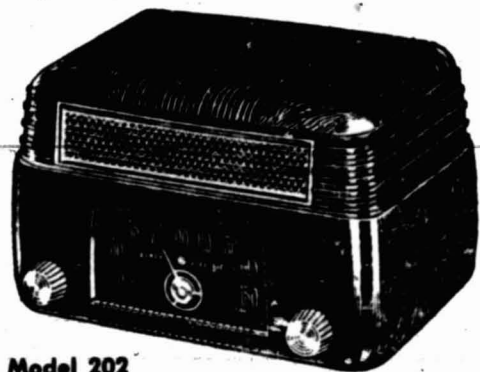

Dr. A. L. Van Meter, chairman of the Floral Culture Division of the Monterey County Fair that opens on August 27 and will run through August 30, announces that the Floral Culture Pavilion is ready for exhibition, 6,500 square feet having been taken by the Women's Clubs, Women of the Grange, and commercial exhibitors, including Gump's of San Francisco.

Women's Clubs showing are: Monterey Civic Club, Carmel Woman's Club, Monterey Peninsula Garden Club, and Carmel Valley Women's Club, the Sigma Pi Gamma sorority of Monterey, the Big Sur Grange, and Marina Grange. Bob Robinson and Bob Mills of the Holman Guest Ranch are putting in a 16x10 foot display of their exotic floral arrangements; and the commercial exhibitors' listing is unusually generous this year, including orchid displays never attempted before. There are four orchid displays and a possible fifth, and Dr. Van Meter says more growers would have been happy to enter if they had been able to time the blooming. There is an intense interest this year in orchid display; it has brought the orchid growers together as never before, and may be the beginning of their own orchid display, the chairman believes. plays will be brought down from San Leandro by C. E. Wilson, and an area will be devoted to orchids grown locally.

About 1,500 square feet of show space has been prepared for the amateurs, who will exhibit floral arrangements, specimen flowers, and potted plants, and the shelves for the display area have been tiered so everything will be shown to advantage.

The four judges are: Mrs. W. J. Bourgoin, Watsonville, flower arrangements and amateurs of the clubs and granges; N. L. McElhaney, from Aptos, cut flowers; Richard McIntosh, Redwood City, commercial gardens; Ray B. Hartman, San Jose, potted plants.

An attractive feature of this year's fair grounds are the two gardens, one on each side of the entrance, dramatized by spreading live oak trees as their focal point. The gardens are the compliments of Orville Watkins, superintendent of parks of Monterey in the name of the city, and L. A. Downey, city gardener of Pacific Grove.

C. R. Johnson, president of the Van Vaulkenburg Company, which will start work sewer the Point and Scenic Drive areas next week, estimated that the work will be completed before the rains start, in about 90 days.

William O'Donnell

Everybody who knew William O'Donnell, editor and associate publisher of the Monterey Peninsula Herald, will regret his death, which took place early Tuesday morning in Monterey, following a relapse after an operation several months ago.

He managed to live the harried life of a small town newspaper editor and still retain a friendly spirit toward his fellow man. He gave himself generously to his community.

"Bill" came to Monterey 22 years ago from the San Jose Mercury-Herald, where he had served as an editorial writer, and where he had met and married Mayo Hayes, who had been society editor for the same paper.

Preceding his stint on the Mercury-Herald he served as lieutenant in the army air corps in World War I.

He was a native of North Tonawanda, New York, a graduate of Cornell University with a B. A. and an LL. B. degree.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Martine Joseph O'Donnell of North Tonawanda.

Funeral services were private, and on the request of Mrs. O'Donnell, a host of friends sent contributions to the Foundation for Cancer Research instead of flowers.

Nellie Montague To Speak For Church Sale

Speaking on behalf of the Church of the Wayfarer's Auxiliary in its efforts to raise funds to be used in giving aid to the Navajo Indians of Arizona and New Mexico, Nellie Montague, curator of the Carmel Art Gallery, will appear on two local radio programs. On Friday at 9:30, on the Ivy Lauer show over KMBY, Mrs. Montague will announce the sale of the Isabell Smith Indian collection, to be held in the social hall of the Church of the Wayfarer, on Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. On Saturday, at 9:45, over KDON, she will be interviewed by Margaret Foster, and will speak of the importance and value of the Smith collection as a representation of our early American culture.

On Monday night, at 8 p. m., at the Church of the Wayfarer, Mrs. Montague will speak further on the collection and will tell of many of her own experiences among the Indians of the Southwest. Planning to be present at this lecture is Mrs. Rosanna Winsor, who has been a teacher at the Hunters Point Navajo Indian school, a government elementary school which is being sponsored by the auxiliary.

Workers who will be in charge of the sale Wednesday are Mrs. Ted Fehring, Mrs. Annie Vaughan, Miss Kay Rodgers, Mrs. J. W. Patterson, Mrs. Julia Corbin, Mrs. K. Higuera bested Johnny DeAmaral in defeating the Carmel Boys' Club. Charley pitched a five-hitter and gave up two walks, while DeAmaral was touched for eight blows and issued three Annie Oakleys. Sanchez hit a potent three for four to lead the mace-wielders in the game.

LOCAL WACS WIN SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT

The Fort Ord Wac Detachment Softball Team No. 6003rd A. S. Y., took top honors for the second consecutive year in the Sixth Army softball tourney now being held at Fort Ord, when they downed the Presidio of San Francisco Wac Detachment team two straight games, 9-2, 6-3.

Lorraine Dennis was the winning pitcher, and Skippy Yonovich was credited with both losses for San Francisco.

SWIMMING MEET AT HIGH SCHOOL POOL WEDNESDAY

Carmel kids will have a chance to try their swimming prowess in a competitive way next Wednesday at 2 o'clock, when the annual Recreation department swimming meet will take place. Under the guidance of Fred Hamlen, Joan Carr, Ginger Klein, and Rod Dewar, a series of aquatic exhibitions will be interspersed with the swim races. Pattern swimming performed by Joan's finny troupe will prove interesting to the spectators, as will the life-saving exhibitions of Rod and Ginger's pupils. There will be events for youngsters from 6 to 16 and merit certificates will be presented for winning contestants. Parents are invited and encouraged to be on hand to cheer the kids on and see what the off-spring can do in the water. Remember the date — Wednesday, August 24, at 2 p. m.

Going down for the fiesta, and of course, especially to see her daughter-in-law receive her many honors, is Mrs. Arthur Gergen. While there she will stay with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Harrison. The celebration will be over the Labor Day weekend.

Filipino Community To Enter Float In Centennial Parade

The Filipino Community of Monterey Peninsula, headquarters at Carmel, is preparing to participate in the coming Centennial parade in Monterey. Plaridel R. Macahilig, president of the Filipino Community, wishes to announce that the organization will enter a float in the parade on September 3.

Preparations are now in full swing. Members of the organization are all cooperating to reach as many non-members as possible to help swell the fund they are now raising for their float. In the past Centennial celebration, all Filipinos on the Peninsula cooperated. This year, with the same enthusiastic response from all concerned, the organization expects to put up a float just as good as the last one, if not better. Many have already given their contributions to the members now busy going around in Pacific Grove and Monterey. Miss Albertina Agudo, a charming graduate of Monterey Peninsula College, is helping with the campaign to raise funds.

Pio Reloque, one of the members, will design, build, and decorate the organization's float. Several members will help with the work. Mrs. Mary Yeban and Angelo Blanquera are the busiest in the campaign.

Council Clarifies Its Position In Zoning Law Controversy

ing ordinance pending the outcome of the current effort to amend it) is enough to cause every fair-minded Carmelite to blush with shame. The law was not effectively enforced during the war years because our national interest in winning the war was paramount, and because the Ordinance therefore literally could not be enforced. But the situation is vastly different today. The present Council, elected in April, 1948, on a platform accepted by ALL Candidates at that election to 'preserve Carmel,' and to guard against 'the advance of commercialism,' directed their first efforts in office towards getting effective enforcement of ALL Carmel Ordinances. They have consistently insisted, in public statements and Council Chamber discussions on full enforcement of Carmel laws. There are today no compelling reasons of policy blocking enforcement of this law. Many of our property owners are under court order restraining them from renting rooms to more than three paying guests, under penalty of contempt of court for violating the court's order. Many more are voluntarily refraining from knowingly violating the law, in a fine spirit of ethical conduct and good citizenship. It would be a gross injustice toward our law abiding property owners for the City administration to countenance violation of the zoning law, even if the council had authority to make such a decision. Needless to say, we have no authority to excuse anyone from the duty of obeying our City Ordinances.

"As the Labor Day weekend and the Centennial Celebration draw near, and the temptation to cash in on rentals at the expense of Carmel's civic well-being reaches its zenith, let no one violate the Zoning Law in the mistaken belief that this Council will 'wink' at violations of the law. This administration intends to enforce the City Ordinances as long as they remain the law of our City."

Carmel Youngsters Win Three Awards In Craft Show

When the judges committee of the Students Craft Show at the Peninsula Libraries made the awards on Monday, August 15, the displays were considered so interesting that arrangement was made for the entire exhibit to be shown as a unit in the Monterey County Fair, August 27-30.

The Monterey Library received a donation of $25 for prizes, which was matched by the Carmel Crafts Guild. All the libraries cooperated in getting the exhibits together.

At the Pacific Grove Library there were 75 entries; in Monterey and Carmel there were 25 and 14 entries respectively. At the Pacific Grove Library there was a preponderance of beautiful copper work, one brass piece; and considerable originality was shown in the ceramics and decorative textile pieces. Seaside craftsmen had six entries.

In Carmel honorable mentions were made as follows: to Emmett Dunlap, 8, for a colorful clown puppet; to Jeanne Fratessa, 11, for a copper picture of a diving duck; and to little Tim O'Shea, 9, for a lovely ceramic madonna.

Howell Armor, Carmel wood carver, was chairman of the judges committee, supported by Marion Brueck, Carmel Art Shop, Sara Kistler, Carmel weaver, and Francis Whitaker, Carmel metal worker, and Glen Minchell, Monterey potter. The display will be held for another week at each library when they will all go to the fair for final judging.

The Time Has Come . .

By Kippy Stuart

Landscaping presents a problem; trees versus garden. Home owners, who are so fortunate as to have ancient oak trees on their property, had better be satisfied with just oak trees. The struggle to grow flowering plants beneath the oak tree is never-ending. The constant litter of falling leaves makes frequent raking necessary, and there you are, pulling out cineraria by the roots, or breaking your back by leaning over and raking with your fingers. There is no end to falling oak leaves. This is aggravating to gardeners because the soil beneath oak trees is so desirable.

If the property boasts stately pine trees, too, you are in double-trouble, for the pine needles have a way of sticking to shrubs and flowers planted beneath them and making an untidy picture. If pine needles are not frequently raked a mattress forms on the ground of twisted and matted litter which sours the ground with pitch and there you are, nursing suffering plants.

I have seen so-called mulch piles of valuable oak leaves, but these particular mulch piles were useless because of the pine needles that formed half of the bulk. Pine needles are anathema to many plants and should never be thrown in the compost pile that is to be used generally throughout the garden.

Os, yes, there are many plants that will grow in the shade of either the oak or the pine; that is, if you are determined to make the struggle.

Cineraria, azalea, rhododendron, are naturals for the shady spots in the garden and these plants enjoy the pitch in the soil that surrounds the pine trees. If you want just ground cover to fight with the falling leaves and needles, Vinca is the answer. Vinca belongs to the dogbane family and is more familiarly called ground-myrtle or periwinkle. Vinca gallops along sending out new roots wherever a branch touches the ground; its flowers are a lovely blue and in spring the plants bloom profusely. Vinca requires gallons of water to keep it fresh and green.

I know what I am talking about this time, for I have made the struggle for ten years. I am confronted with 17 pine trees in my garden and a grove of ancient oak trees. I started out valiantly, wasting my time and money to beautify the pine grove but I have given up and turned the pine grove back to nature, and I must say that nature had done a better job than I did. I like to look at the pine needles beneath the trees; I like to look at the golden oak leaves making pools beneath the trees.

If you want low-lying shrubs beneath these trees, all varieties of veronica will do the trick. The only shrubs that I left beneath the pine trees are veronica and I give them small attention. Veronica seems to like the pine pitch in the soil and I am much obliged to them for thriving and for not clamoring for attention.

DO YOU REMEMBER THE BEAUTIFUL FLORENTINE CHRISTMAS CARDS WE USED TO get before the war? The Bookmen are mightily pleased to announce that they are once more available. Both cards and envelopes are illuminated in red, blue, and gold and sell at prices no higher than the standard commercial greeting. If you prefer a Christmas greeting which is both rich and traditional, don't fail to see these. However, it wouldn't be wise to wait too long, as — like all imported items—the supply is not unlimited.

The Bookmen also want to remind Taylor Caldwell fans that her new novel is just out. Titled "Let Love Come Last," it is one of her typically dramatic and penetrating studies in human relationships. It's almost bound to be a best-seller this fall.

A reminder: if you haven't seen "White Collar Zoo" you've missed the best laughs in many a publishing season!

High Jungle, by William Beebe
REVIEWED BY CARL DARRELL

A new book by William Beebe is a major event for people interested in creatures like birds, fish, and insects. He is the director of the Department of Tropical Research of the New York Zoological Society. He headed an expedition to the top of the world in the Himalayas to study the pheasants in their native haunts, and he was lowered a half-mile under-sea in his bathysphere.

His past three expeditions have been devoted to a square kilometer of cloud jungle around his Rancho Grande laboratory in the Venezuelan Andes; he tells about his observations on these latest trips in High Jungle.

Dr. Beebe's rich command of words and his vivid style add much to the reader's enjoyment of his books, and his humor enlivens every page. One chapter heading is Lt. Francis of the Plaster Cast. I will tell you only that he was trying to hold a ladder, which fell on him and by some miracle broke only his leg; he says, "It confirmed the old saying that the only time it is unlucky to walk under a ladder is when you are carrying it."

A few other chapter headings are A Jungle Castle, Hummingbirds of the Mist, Highway of the Air, Private Lives of Jungle Falcons, Parade of the Maggots, Battles of the Beetles, Moth Nights, and Feathered Good Neighbors. You'll read about the deadly ferde-lance (Beebe writes it as one word), giant butterflies and moths.

Beebe's laboratory and living-quarters were in A Jungle Castle, built about 1935 by "Juan Vicente Gomez, President of Venezuela, and the last great dictator in South America." This great building, unfinished because of the death of the dictator, was put at the disposal of the scientists by the Venezuelan government, which helped Beebe in many ways; the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Creole Petroleum Corporation gave them generous support.

Beebe's party included an entomologist, an artist, and a research zoologist. They had half a ton of microscopes, binoculars, cameras, paint, books, and laboratory equipment. After a short stay with friends in Caracas, they moved to a hotel in Maracay, about 68 miles from Caracas, going to Rancho Grande a month later.

In the chapter Wild Life in the Castle, he tells us about the ferde-lance that gave birth to 28 young in the castle, frogs, skunks, rats, mouse opossums, caterpillars and moths. Outdoors were howling monkeys, capuchin monkeys, parakeets, army ants, ospreys, turkey vultures, crabs, weasels; I could go on for several pages. It's something like the catalog of ships or the "begates" in the Old Testament. Nothing seems too large or too small for Beebe.

Every once in a while Dr. Beebe modestly compares the little he (or any other scientist) knows with what remains unknown. I like this: Having an I. Q. in mathematics lower than would be thought possible in any human being alive, my mind is always excited by any simple kindergarten problem. Most of us would be satisfied if we knew half as much as Beebe. Somewhere he speaks of the fun he has in his work. The following is an example of this. "March 6, 1945, was our first day at Rancho Grande, and on the road near the pass I heard a voice and made a note of it. 'Some jungle bird has a phrase exactly like that of a whippoorwill, but preceded by a tumbling mass of wonderful song. The leaves moved, but I could not see a bird.' I might as well have had a rubber stamp made of this last sentence and used it in my journal every day thereafter. . . . As days and months passed with continual frustration, a resolution became a decision, that I would not resort to the easy method of a shot, nor would I devote too much time to this ornithological by-product." I wish I could give you the whole story — you'll have to read the book to get it. At last, July 21, he saw the bird, knew it was a wren, and on his return to the laboratory he looked at the skins of wrens in their collection, and found it to be a wren of the same genus as the Carolina wren. Beebe likes to call it the whippoorwill wren. Later he found a nest with two eggs. It was July 21 when he saw the first one; later he saw many.

This is the twenty-second book written by William Beebe; let us hope there will be many more.

William Hamilton

Bringing to a close a long and successful business career combined with zealous activity in the church life of his community, death came quietly to William H. Hamilton at his home on Junipero street, at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, August 16, following a seemingly mild heart attack the day before. During the 12 years he lived in Carmel he served the Church of the Wayfarer in turn as superintendent of the Sunday School, chairman of religious education, member of the executive board, leader of the adult Bible class, and usher, which last office he filled at one of the services last Sunday morning. He was always on hand before the service to welcome newcomers to the church school and to help the children find their places in the class rooms. His friendly smile greeted the adults entering the church.

Born at Fort Burrell, Canada, on December 10, 1864, early in life he moved to Jackson, Michigan, then to Adrian, Michigan, where he bought a grocery and china store. After several years he moved to Battle Creek, where for 50 years he carried on a similar business. Selling this store, he built five mausoleums in Michigan and two in the western part of this country. He was an active member of the Baptist Church during this time, and served as superintendent of the, Sunday School for 18 years. He married and brought up one son and four daughters, and at the time of his death had also seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. This past spring he greatly enjoyed his annual visit to all his family and old friends in the North and the Middlewest.

Some years after the death of his wife he married Mrs. Mabel Turner, who with her husband during his life enjoyed a close friendship with the Hamilton family. They have made their home in Carmel, from which in his very active retirement he made yearly visits to his family and his businesses in Michigan. Mrs. Hamilton, who survives him, was also active in the Church of the Wayfarer until failing health kept her close at home.

Private services were held at Paul's Mortuary in Pacific Grove; his daughter, Mrs. Sue Cooper of Seattle, came down for the service and accompanied his body back to Battle Creek, his final resting place.

Activation makes the difference

Shell splits molecules: Shell scientists take the finest available crude — activate the molecules by splitting them and rearranging the atoms according to Shell's formula for a perfectly balanced gasoline. The result—Shell Premium, the most powerful gasoline your car can use!

YES, many of today's engines have been stepped-up . . . they call for more powerful gasoline! Now Shell gives you the most powerful gasoline your car can use—Shell Premium—it's "activated." No other fuel can top its power in your car!

This is made possible by Shell's own, specially produced power components and by Shell's own blending methods!

Actually, Shell splits molecules to get more power for today's more powerful engines. So you get a gasoline that's "activated" 3 ways!

1. Activated for knockless power!
2. Activated for fast "getaway."
3. Activated for full mileage.

Guild's Claudia A Success

BY MARY CALUORI

In California's first open air community theatre, on Sunday night, a unique experiment in outdoor play adaptation wrote itself into Forest Theatre Guild history as an outstanding success.

I attended the play on its last night, which was a beautiful one. The stars were out and although the moon was late, it finally got there and made an entrance. Straight ahead, behind the open stage there was a patch of velvety blue studded with millions of stars. The stage props could be dimly seen in the darkness, and although we knew the setting was beautiful, we anticipated the lights for the sake of those who hadn't seen, and when they came the reaction was gratifying, for the setting was one a cosmopolitan theater might well have been proud of.

In eleven rehearsals Forrest Barnes tied up all the tag ends of a quick production and rounded out his players' performances to almost professional smoothness. Watching him at rehearsals I had decided that performance finesse was a foregone conclusion. He is untiring, efficient, experienced. "Do it the easy way," he says, "Give everyone a chance to work and acquire experience. Why try to do it all yourself?" That's how he worked. With Judy Campbell trailing him around and taking down the comments he made from one half hour to the next in a continuum of rehearsals, he couldn't miss. With Elizabeth Fogel and her capable group of stage hands working all over the Peninsula to bring to the stage the props that would make the setting glamorous, how could he miss in the frame she made for his production?

Nancy Brown, in one production, has reached professional ingenuitè stature. I sat behind her mother who remarked that she had been "a steady cash customer" and I heard her mother say that Nancy had wanted to go on the stage since she was four, but that this was her first appearance. In the light of that statement her talent development in one production seems phenomenal.

But Nancy was flanked by a stage-wise troupe of other luminaries to support her and lead her up into peak performance. Good solid performance on the part of Betty MacDougall, for instance, Claudia's mother, was bound to be to Nancy's advantage; and although in script as well as on stage the full flavor of Barabara Stitt's Madame Daruschka would have the effect of mollifying the unexperienced Claudia, it made for good stage business and reactions from the audience. Barbara drew exclamations from everybody.

David Naughton, Claudia's husband, was as likeable and just the right combination of brute and saint, with the rough edges buffed off by fine directing. This young man is good material for any future production. Jerry Seymoure, the suave Englishman from next door, made the most of what must have been an enjoyable role. The two servants, Rosa and John, portrayed by Adeline and John Craig, were sympathetically interpreted. The pathos of their roles was not mishandled nor was it lost on the audience. Ellen Leeds, as Julia Naughton, gave a dead pan interpretation of Julia that exemplifies the Julias of the world in juxtaposition to the Claudias. I thought

Dee Olivetti Plays Lola At First Theatre

Tonight and tomorrow night mark the final and closing performances of The Road to Frisco at California's First Theater, Monterey, the melodrama of Gold Rush days directed by Freeman Sargent, which has been delighting First Theater audiences since last May.

Lola Montez, written by Melce-na Burns Denny for the First Theater, will open next Thursday night, August 25, and will run daily through Centennial week, every night but Wednesday, August 31, up to and including Sunday night, September 4. After that it will run Saturday and Sunday nights only.

Said Riza, the gifted actor who scored so brilliantly in a number the play a wonderful example of teamwork and efficient direction and in the last analysis feel that the success of the play should be laid at the feet of Forrest Barnes, who directed it. He will turn at once to his efficient staff and give them the bow.

of Edward Kuster's productions, is directing Lola Montez, and himself playing the role of the bewitched King Ludwig.

Dee Olivetti is cast as the ravishing Lola, "the uncrowned queen of Bavaria," who swept like a tornado across Europe, and was front page news on two hemispheres. Holt Wood, Donna Powers, Marjorie Phlanz, Henry McCord, Esther Fleharty, Douglas Douthit, John Militano, Duke Cigranz, Gertrude Batdorf and Pamela Beal complete the cast.

Holt Wood will emcee the show, the olio also presenting Eileen McDermott, Jim Jensen, Isabel Solis, Joan Fowler, Connie Favalora and Lollie Solis. Costumes are by Rhoda Johnson, the curtains painted by Maxine Albro, stage technician Richard Johnson, props James Vincent.

WORLD FEDERALIST SPEAKER

Alan Cranston, who replaces Cord Meyer, Jr., as president of the United World Federalists on October 1, will speak in the Salinas high school auditorium on Tuesday, August 23, at 8 p. m. No admission will be charged, and everyone is invited to come.

In addition bidders are requested (but not required) to supply an estimate of the total net interest cost to the City on the basis of their respective bids, which shall be considered as informative only and not binding on either the bidder or the City. Checks of the unsuccessful bidders will be returned upon the award of the bonds. No interest will be paid upon the deposit made by any successful bidder.

Do You Remember . . . ?

THE DOME

BY A. G. WARSHAWSKY

As for Andre, so far from becoming embittered against the other sex, her broken idyll seemed to have increased her natural generosity of character, for she would often post gratis for the poor artist—yes, and even provide many of them with a much needed meal! There was Louise, a handsome, statuesque Alsatian, who had migrated from the atelier of the modiste to that of the painter, and revelled in the change of atmosphere. Though fidelity in love was not her strong suit, she was a true friend and a charming companion. To her the gods were gracious, for she married a wealthy Frenchman (such things do happen, even in Bohemia!) and from then on lived the serene and sober life of a chateleine on a lovely estate in the Loire country, near Tours. She and Andre remained fast friends, and each year the latter spent several weeks at the chateau of her more fortunate friend.

But of all the fair ones who frequented the Dome, there is no doubt that Margaret Ducros was the fairest—a lovely figure, a heart-shaped face, and starry blue eyes—in fact, a real beauty. A picture I once painted of her and which was exhibited at the Salon, showed her seated at a cafe table, a large hat shading her upper face, while the mirror behind her reflected musicians in red playing in the cafe. I called the picture L'arraignee—The Spider. I regret to say that some of the girls, who read the title in a catalogue, seized on it as a nickname for Margaret and that it stuck to her for many years. Poor dear! She was more the fly than spider. She wandered off to more tempting pastures, and years later I saw her in a Montmartre cabaret, elaborately dressed and even more richly painted than on my canvas.

And of course there was Zezette. Not beautiful, nor even pretty, but a witty and intelligent madcap, whose admirers and lovers were legion. So great was her charm, that even the flouted ones would swear by her. I remember a gory battle waged in front of the Dome between two of her protendants. But instead of rewarding the victor in the traditional manner, it was found that when the fight was over, Zezette had walked off on the arm of an American sculptor, who had struck her fancy for the moment. She later married a distinguished philosopher, who appreciated in her a ripe philosophy not gained from books and a fund of wisdom not acquired in the schools.

As for the other fair frequenters of the Dome, they seemed to lead a butterfly's existence, drifting in and out, here today, gone tomorrow, living for the happy moment. And, strange to say, despite all we have heard from moralists on the inevitable end of those who "tread the primrose path of dalliance," the majority have settled down with husbands of their own and children, too, making as good, and often better, wives and mothers than the "comme il faut" young ladies to whom, in earlier days, they had to resign their lovers, when it was time for the latter to become "serious."

To the weary, discouraged, and often homesick art student many of these girls had disinterested affection, revived their courage, and gave them a new zest in life. Nor were these attachments necessarily of a sordid nature, aiming merely at pleasure and profit, as the purists would have us believe, when inveighing against the immorality of the Latin Quarter. As often as not, it was the man who profited more than his companion from such liaisons, for the moral atmosphere of these so-called "faux menages" was frequently less deleterious, more wholesome, than that of many legalized unions. Even the merely practical results are at times of lasting value. It is a well known fact that many very successful artists and writers in Paris owe their initial start to the ingenuity, flair, and aggressiveness of a "petite amie," who has acted for

THE BROKEN GULL

*I found a broken gull,
Its crisp wings slanting
To a sky as dull
As its gray feathers' flightless bow.
I found it so,*

*And tried then to conceive,
Now curved in sand
What arcs it had to leave
Unscribed on parchments of the air.
I found it there,*

*Buried in brine and grass:
The wings renounce
The air and will not pass
Again the seaweed tongues washed back,
Porous and black.*

—W. W. TRIMPI

HOUSING PROJECT INSOMNIA

*Halfprivacy prevails. Thin wall and floor
Mute, but not enough, the wheeze, the snore,
The cheap alarm clock's tick—the word—next door.*

*A faucet drips. I start awake once more.
Where are the night sounds that I knew before?
The rising, falling wail of a passing train,
A faroff foghorn's somnolent refrain,
Softspoken dialogue of trees and rain . . .*

Oh, to hear crickets tell country time again!
—EDITH LODGE

FEUD

*Ma Dilly knitted at an even pace (nor heard the ocean's roar and boom), erect, absorbed, immutable
she transformed beach to sitting-room Selina's thin ungracious length slowly relaxed to the sand's embrace:
she flattened her shoulders and deeply pressed her face and breast and hands and feet close to the white seductive heat.*

*(Her pale blue eyes, in secret, cover frustrate days and nights;
her mouth has never known a lover nor love's delights.)*

*Impatiently she jerked
a cap that bound her brow and irked.
"Great God, what hair," I cried (bright maples flying in October, and copper bowls that tell of sober lamps near by;
burning dawns in a tropic sky
after a tropic day.)*

*Deprecating she denied,
"I never care about my hair
when it's washed or dried or waved or curled:
it could be any dull color in the world."*

*Ma Dilly's needles clicked and twirled;
she knitted and flung her challenge out;
"Why Selina it's all you care about!"*

him as publicity agent, procuring him patronage and useful connections.

Of course there is another side to the picture. Dramas, even tragedies, do occur. The young man is forced to return to his native land, promising to come back, and for a while poor Madame Butterfly counts on the promise, until there is no use hoping any longer. She has been "lachee," "plaquee," abandoned—all is over! But it isn't always easy to seek death when one is young. On the other hand, to go on living may be even harder. And then there comes a new hope and a new lonely one to comfort.

But the major tragedies resulting from such liaisons are not the partings, however cruel; for youth can forget and forgive. It is the unwise marriage, the misalliance, which often spells the real tragedy. Two beings, who lived happily and confidently in an atmosphere of liberty, more faithfully often than many a married couple, decide "to pass before M. le Maire"—to get legally united. It is then, in most cases, that the trouble begins. Moving in more conventional circles, he realizes that his wife, who fitted so well into the atmosphere of the studio and the cafe, does not adapt herself to the new life as he had hoped. Especially is this the case if he returns to his original milieu, his own family circle. She remains a stranger, an outsider, "not one of us." And when fame and social recognition fall to his lot, the gap between the two may widen into an unbridgeable gulf, as in the case of my landlady at the Villa Brune. As the husband adds to his artistic and social stature, the once charming little model and studio companion, lapses into frowsy middle age, gives up the struggle, and becomes a drag on her husband in his ascension. Henri Bataille in his famous play, La Femme Nue, has given a true and striking picture of the tragedy of such misalliances. Yet there are exceptions to prove this rule, and I know of some very happy marriages that have resulted from a faux menage. In one instance, the girl, who had been a humble little model, came to America with her famous painter husband, and became quite the grande dame and a valuable social asset.

Among the well known writers who frequented the old Dome, was Oscar Wilde, in former days; and in my day one would see there on occasion Booth Tarkington, Will Irwin, James Hopper, Wythe Williams, Samuel Blythe, Montague Glass, Forrest Wilson, George D. Gribble, and some others. Fred Fisher, tall, debonair, fur-coated, swinging a cane, was the Don Juan of the cafe. To his insidious charms, the fair denizens succumbed in wholesale succession, but not one of them ever laid him by the heels, for he had the inconstancy of his famous prototype, though all the French he learned from them during his many years in Paris never exceeded Allo Bebee!

Many of the men who frequented the Quarter played at the arts as an excuse to live the Bohemian life. To prove to the folks at home that they were serious-minded and working at their jobs, they would contrive to get their work exhibited at the Salon. I know of cases where the soi-distant artists, incapable of executing any work that could hope to pass the jury, hired a clever and very needy young painter, who would paint pictures which these artistic deadheads would sign. One of them, a wealthy American, managed through these methods to be elected a societaire of the Salon des Beaux Arts.

The two Dunning brothers, Cheever and Harold, both writers and habitués of the Dome, maintained a curious relationship of mutual aloofness. On one occasion Harold asked me if I knew Cheever well enough to be able to negotiate a loan for him. Cheever, the poet, was one of the most expert and lucky among the poker players, sometimes winning considerable sums with which he would eke out his very meagre resources. His lodgings consisted of a tiny room, furnished with a bed, two chairs, a table, and a stove, facing on to a small courtyard-garden in the Rue Notre Dame-des-Champs, for which he paid about six dollars a month.

Feel in a rut over those summer time meals? Then by all means hie yourself to MAC'S POULTRY SHOP and invest in the makings of a meal that's sure to be tops with the whole family. Come Sunday, a fresh turkey hen served any of a number of different ways would make a big hit with everyone. There are roasters, fryers, broilers, fricassee, to take your pick. Fresh country ranch eggs, too, are to be had, for 'round the clock cooking, so stop by MAC'S POULTRY SHOP, at San Carlos near Sixth street and take home a really special dinner for the family.

What won't they think of next? Now there's a device called Reeleash, an automatic dog leash all equipped to 'reel' in pooch at the flick of a button! Stainless steel cable wire makes it strong enough to hold up to 300 pounds of dog, and it locks at any length up to five feet. You'll find Reeleash at the VAGABOND'S CORNER, Pine Inn Gardens.

You may be scrambling around fixing that wardrobe up for fall, but have you stopped to think that there's something else that could stand fixing up, too? We mean your floors, of course, and the people to do that fixing are at the CARMEL FLOOR COVERING CO. A quick visit to the shop will enable you to pick just the right shade of linoleum, carpet, or whatever you need, and with expert installation your home will look like new. And speaking of linoleum, there are some mighty attractive shades and patterns on hand; reds, greens, blues, everything (even one that looks like tile!) For college gals or just anybody you'll like the handmade cotton bathroom rugs, too. (But they tell me they're not exactly inexpensive, so if you're interested, be prepared.) Real quality, though, and made in Carmel, they'd be perfect gifts. Your home will certainly benefit if you pay a visit to the CARMEL FLOOR COVERING CO., so stop by soon. San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh.

All the rage for, back-to-school nightwear are the new Tommies pajamas at PUTNAM AND RAGGETT'S! Warm on a wintry night, the Tommies Red Devils come in a one-piece coverall featuring a long zipper down the front, convertible turtle neck collar, and soft, washable flannelette all in bright, gay red. You'll like the Jumpa-jama Tommieset, too, with its overall-effect, complete with make-believe suspenders, plaid top, and matching plaid Tommiecoat. (You can wear the Tommiecoats for lounging, or sleep in 'em separately, so the Tommie-set does double duty.) And all Tommies are proportioned to fit your height, too! Order yours from PUTNAM AND RAGGETT'S soon and be the hit of the pajama parade.

Puttering around the kitchen is loads of fun, but only when you have a good guide to go by. That means an extra-special cookbook, which is just what you'll find over at HOLMAN'S BOOK DEN. The new Sunset Cook Book will fast become your standby for reference on anything and everything related to cooking, it's so complete and conveniently arranged. Spiral binding allows the pages to lie flat although the book is quite thick (it should be, with all those recipes!) Special protection against cooking spills for the cover, too. And such yummy things you can make from the recipes in the Sunset Cook Book! Just a peek will convince you that this is the cook book for you. You'll find it at HOLMAN'S BOOK DEN, main floor at Holman's Department Store in Pacific Grove.

New things are happening all the time down at Rayfield's LOUISIANA ROOM in La Ribera Hotel, and this week it's the announcement of a special family-priced dinner in the offing. Within the next few days you'll be able to dine in style at a price designed to fit your pocketbook, with the full meal featuring authentic Southern cooking. You'll enjoy the tempting Creole dishes at the LOUISIANA ROOM, and all the trimmings for a really special meal. Generous proportions are assurance that nobody will go home the least bit hungry, (and if you'd like some of that Louisiana Gumbo with your dinner, be sure to ask for it.) The price of this special family dinner hasn't been announced yet, but that proverbial "little bird" told us that it's to be $1.65 for the whole thing. So make Rayfield's LOUISIANA ROOM a regular on your list of dine-out favorites. Lincoln and Seventh or phone 32-W for reservations.

Hungry for something different in the way of good eating? And do you mentally groan at the price lists of restaurants nowadays? Then you'd better hustle down to LA MAISONETTE for an evening's enjoyable meal for the practically unbelievable price of only $1.00! It's true, and the food is as wonderful as the price. There are always four entrees to choose from and you can rest assured that one of these will be a French specialty of Fernand's. All those little added touches that make eating out such a pleasure are there, too, so you'll want to take everybody along for a meal at LA MAISONETTE. There's also the de luxe dinner, if you prefer, so whatever sort of savory French dish appeals to you, Fernand is there to see that you get it. LA MAISONETTE is located at Lincoln and Sixth streets in Carmel.

What could be more fun than picking out gay, new cottons for back to school wear? Nothing at all, if you're picking them out at the COLLEGIATE DRESS SHOP in Monterey! Here is an array of plaids, prints, and solid colors that are all so smart you'll have a hard time deciding which you like the best. Always a favorite are the tailored-yet-feminine patterns, and that's just what COLLEGIATE has for you. One crispy-cool style features a solid color material with tiny collar, back fastened neck, and yoke with just the right touch of shirring for trim. Plaids are more "musts" for fall, whether they be bold patterns in bright autumn colors, set off by touches of white pique for trim, or demure little two piece suit-effect dresses. There's even a pinafore style, in plaid with contrasting pastel blouse for an old fashioned look. And the prices are the best of all! All of these gay little cottons are to be had at only $7.95 and $8.95 at COLLEGIATE DRESS SHOP, 489 Alvarado in Monterey.

The last word in knitting is the Passap Swiss home hand knitting machine now at KAY'S KNITTING KLINIC. Amazing hand knit work is turned out by the machine, and you'll be glad to hear that Mrs. Gould, who demonstrates this new easy way to knit, will be here on Monday, August 22, to show you just how it works. Be sure to drop by KAY'S KNITTING KLINIC on Monday any time from 10-1 or 2-5 and see for yourself. Location is upstairs at the northwest corner of Lincoln and Seventh.

Yellow is a color that will brighten any scene, whether it be your living room or the sick room of a friend. And the large yellow mums at the FLOR DE MONTEREY furnish some of the gayest color in flowers that we've seen in a long time. Of course there are other shades, too, but we know you'll especially like the big yellow ones. All sorts of plant containers, vases, and the like are on display at FLOR DE MONTEREY beside the gay array of blooms. Brass and copper are attractive settings for plants in any atmosphere, or if you prefer there are such things as wide-eyed frogs with a place to plant flowers in their backs, or elephants to guard your garden. And you'll love the miniature cactus gardens, already planted and ready to grace your decor. Why not pay a visit soon to FLOR DE MONTEREY and take home an armful of cheery color? At 217 Franklin street in Monterey.

Kids' parties can be hectic, but there's no reason for it if you keep the crowd entertained and happy. They'll be amazingly quiet, too, (if that's possible) when they're busy looking at one of the cartoon rental films from CAMERA CRAFT. For only fifty cents you can rent any of the eight millimeter films, to be used in your own projector (or you can also rent one of these at the shop.) The whole gang will love to watch the antics of Puss 'n' Boots, Simple Simon, and Jack and the Beanstalk, as well as sports films. So for a party that'll be remembered for a long time to come as a real success, stop by CAMERA CRAFT and make arrangements to rent one of the new cartoon films. CAMERA CRAFT is located on Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Dolores.

STOCK DESTROYED BY FIRE

Almost the entire stock of the Sargent Health Food Store on Mission between Fifth and Sixth streets was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. At 3:50 a. m. two men leaving town on a hunting trip saw smoke issuing from the building and reported it to the Carmel Fire Department. At the same time a neighbor, Ben Wetzel, hearing the crackling of the flames and seeing the smoke, phoned the department. When the fire truck reached the scene it was found that the fire had been burning several hours but had been confined to the concrete building. The blaze was soon brought under control.

Parties for Claudia

The play, Claudia, which ended last week in a blaze of glory, also was the instigator of three fine parties over the weekend. The people who were lucky enough to get in on the good times were, for the most part, members of the cast, production, and the Forest Theater Guild. The Friday night party was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Barnes, and the Saturday night fling took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Calvert. Sunday night the festivities were rounded out when the group gathered at the home of Ellen Leeds for fun and frolic in the shape of refreshments, singing, rehashing the play, and conversation in general.

Among those who were present at one or more of the three parties were: Nancy Brown, Lionel Goulet, Mr. and Mrs. Ken MacDougal, Betty Fogel, Karen Williams, Mr. and Mrs. George Calvert, Peggy Walsh, Judy Campbell, Helen Prosser, Herbert Heron, Joe Balsamo, Dourthey Black, Mary Caluori, Mine Monohan, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Stitt, Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, John Tyler, Mary Craig, Helen Talbot (from Long Beach), David Prince, and Mr. and Mrs. Steve Crouch.

Former Carmel Artist Coming

William Johnston, who will be remembered by older Carmel residents as painter and portraitist, will be in town sometime in September to visit for a few days. Now the dean of the Royal Academy of London, Mr. Johnston is coming to the United States to bring 200 British exchange students who will study in Colorado.

Mr. Johnston was a familiar figure in Carmel over 15 years ago, at which time he gave lessons in art and exhibited his work in what is now the Carmel Art Association Gallery. The Gallery was then the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Woodward, who were his patrons at that time. Also, while in Carmel, he did the portraits of such well known village figures as the late Baroness Nugent, Charles Aldrich, John Catlin (then mayor of Carmel), David Alberto, and many others.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Tobiasen and son, David, left Monday for the coast country of Mendocino County. Roth, fuchsia fancier, and Mrs. Theresa Ferrero, outstanding young flower arranger from the San Francisco area, will demonstrate their methods of flower arrangements.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p. m. at the Pacific Grove Women's Civic Club, Grand street near Grove, and is open to the public with an admission charge for non-members. Members of the Garden Club are asked to show their membership cards at the door, and are urged to attend the business meeting at 7:30 p. m., preceding the program.

Carlyle Stoney

Funeral services for A. Carlyle Stoney of Carmel Point, who died of a heart attack on Tuesday, August 16, while on a fishing trip in the Sierra, will be held at Paul's Mortuary, Pacific Grove, at 10 a. m. today. Elder Mark Cram of the Church of the Latter Day Saints in Sacramento, a friend of the family, will officiate.

Mr. Stoney, accompanied by his wife, Rose C. Stoney, and sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Stoney, was on a trip to Walker Meadows near Mono Lake, where he liked to go several times a year for fishing. He had had an exceptionally good day of hiking and fishing and apparently felt extremely well, according to Mrs. Stoney, when he went to bed that night. When the family attempted to rouse him in the morning they discovered he had died in his sleep. According to the coroner's finding he had been dead since 2 a. m.

Mr. Stoney came of a Mormon pioneer family who made the long historic cross country trek to colonize in Utah. He was born at Beaver City on August 24, 1890. He took a mining engineer's degree at the University of Utah, and for some years worked as engineer in the Bingham Copper Mines there. In 1917 the family moved to Carmel, and four of the brothers, including Mr. Stoney, went to work for M. J. Murphy, builder, until 1925, when the four brothers established their own contracting and building company here, with the deceased as its head. During the war Mr. Stoney was purchasing agent for the Henry J. Kaiser Richmond shipyards.

The Stoney residence on Carmel Point was built by him and it is interesting to recall that it was located along the extension of the third base line of the old Abalone League diamond, and that Mr. Stoney sponsored a team on which three of his brothers played.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rose C. Stoney of Carmel Point, and by four brothers and two sisters: Maurice L. Stoney, Carmel; Ronald B. Stoney, Carmel Valley; Paul L. Stoney, Aptos; Robert M. Stoney, Ventura; Mrs. L. E. Lewis, Carmel, and Mrs. Norma May of New Jersey.

Interment will be at the Oak Hill Memorial Park in San Jose.

The request for a use permit is based on a provision in the zoning ordinance which provides that the planning commission may authorize an extension of a use to a more restricted district where the district boundary divides premises which were under one ownership upon the first day of April, 1940.

Mrs. Stanton's Normandy Apartments, across the street from the cottages are in the commercial zone.

Her attorney, William McHarry, established to the satisfaction of the planning board that both pieces of property had been under single ownership (that of Mrs. Stanton's mother) at the time of the passing of the zoning ordinance in 1940.

Donald Craig said that he felt the granting of this permit would adversely affect the zoning plan in establishing "an extremely dangerous precedent." Chairman P. A. McCreery thought the psychological effect would be bad in view of the present controversy over the zoning ordinance. He also raised the question that if the request were granted, what would happen in the case of change of ownership.

The Stantons said they intended to put the property in trust for the children.

Craig pointed out that the fact that the cottages had been built in violation of the zoning ordinance should have a bearing on the case, and he questioned the hardship the Stantons offered as justification for asking the permit. "Loss of a portion of income when one is forced to cease operating an illegal business is not a justifiable hardship case," Mrs. Florence Josselyn pointed out that two of the cottages could still be legally rented as dwellings and paying guests taken in to the extent of three, and she believed that under such an arrangement the Stantons would still have a fair return on their investment; she said if this permit were granted, all the other rooming house proprietors whose business has been restricted by the enforcement of the ordinance would claim hardship.

Bert Heron was concerned about three vacant lots next to the Normandy Apartments in the business zone. He felt that if the Stantons were granted a use permit for the cottages, they would be encouraged to build additional apartments on the vacant lots thus putting them to a desirable use in that area, whereas if the permit was denied, the Stantons might find it more profitable to sell the neighboring business lots to somebody who would put up "a super market," spoiling the attractiveness of the neighborhood.

McHarry suggested that in view of the fact that nobody had appeared to protest granting the permit, the board should act favorably. Craig pointed out that when the people elected city officials they expected them to look after the general good of the city without having to troop in to offer protests at every meeting.

Following the hearing the board met as a planning commission. The tree committee recommended that the city council spare the eucalyptus tree on the corner of San Antonio and Ocean. The council had ordered it removed in a street widening project.

Preliminary plans for five two-story commercial buildings along Torres at Third, designed by Irving Caster for Joseph Eichler, were approved.

Report of the beautification committee was given by Mrs. Florence Josselyn and Mrs. Gladys Kiplinger, who said they believed the council should undertake a program of improving the appearance of Ocean Avenue, planting ice plant on the parkway to the side of Ocean Avenue from Carpenter to Mission, and putting a center parkway at lower Ocean Avenue. They suggested improvement of parking arrangements at the foot of Ocean, and recommended the removal of the fence of white-washed hot water tanks that the Pine Cone complained of as unaesthetic back in 1944.

SWIMMING IN ARROYO SECO PROHIBITED

Monterey County Health Department announced today that Dr. Kenneth C. Sheriff, County Health Officer, stated it was necessary to post resort area in the Arroyo Seco against swimming. The County Health Department has been watching this area very closely and posting in this connection was done only after repeated laboratory analysis of the water showed contamination. This action is taken for the protection of public health.

cut wood in the nearby forests to enable her to go on to San Francisco, the passengers wandered about the streets and over the hills, some of them hoping to pick up gold, thinking that the streams, according to a letter of Alcalde Colton's printed in Philadelphia, were paved with gold, and that it could be found most anywhere in California. These Argonauts (named after Jason and his band who sailed on the Argo for the golden fleece) reported that thousands were waiting at Panama for transportation to California, and that thousands more would be coming overland in the spring.

To control and regulate this flood of humanity, Governor Riley on his own account ordered 37 men elected to draw up a constitution for California. Thirty-eight arrived, mostly from the northern part of the province. Of these, seven were native Californians, four were born in Europe, and the rest were Americans—that is they came from the "States."

Among the delegates were many influential and able men, notably Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo who had been sent as a young man on a secret mission to investigate the Russian holdings at Fort Ross, some 20 miles north of San Francisco Bay. Later, on visiting Santa Barbara as military governor, and finding a great lack of discipline among the soldiers at the presidio, he ordered some of them put in the guard house. When this did not improve discipline, he sent others there until the bulk of the garrison was shut up. But as most of these were his relatives or relatives of his wife's family he had no peace until he let them all out, and was made to understand not to expect rigid discipline of Mexican soldiers who were seldom paid.

Jose Antonio Carrillo had been the right hand man of Pio Pico, one of the last of the Mexican governors. He was the oldest delegate, a man of considerable experience, and of great influence. Leo Carrillo is a member of this family.

John A. Sutter, at whose mill-race gold was discovered, served as a soldier of fortune in France before settling in Missouri for a while. He arrived in California during the Mexican regime, became a citizen, acquired 50,000 acres in the Sacramento Valley and the holdings of the Russians at Fort Ross.

Jose Covarrubias gained a lasting reputation for himself and for California when as the representative of the Democratic party he carried the electoral vote to Washington in 1851. He royally treated all his fellow passengers, spending $3,000 on the way to Panama. By the time he reached New York his bill was $10,000. This he charged up to the National Democratic Committee. They very indignantly refused to pay it; but when the Californians back home learned of his reception by Tammany Hall in New York, the parade and band that met him at the boat and accompanied him to his hotel, and the delegation that went with him to Washington lavishing liquid refreshments right and left, the Californians gladly paid the bill, concluding that the state had received more than $10,000 worth of publicity and a reputation for generous hospitality.

Captain Henry Halleck, another delegate, returned East after the convention and became commander of the Army of the West at the outbreak of the Civil War. And there was Jacinto Rodriguez, who later built a fine house on the corner of what is now Franklin and Alvarado streets; and Thomas O. Larkin, whose story is too familiar to need repeating. Dr. Semple, the chairman of the Convention, and the pioneer publisher of Monterey, came overland from Kentucky in 1845. He took part in the revolt of the American settlers who adopted as their standard the Bear Flag. Some time after the convention he founded Benicia, which he succeeded in making the state capital until removed 13 months later to Sacramento.

Pabloa de la Guerra was an important figure at the Convention. He came of a notable family. His father, a Spaniard, had served as commandant of the Presidio of Santa Barbara. Two of Pabloa's sisters were living in Monterey; Teresa de Jesus, married to William P. Hartnell, and Maria de las Angustias, married to Senor Jimeno Casarin. Mr. Hartnell, for whom the college at Salinas was named, served as interpreter at the convention. He is said to have established the first school in Monterey; however, there were teachers in Monterey before his time but they taught only boys, and school hours were irregular. Girls received what training they got at home and spent most of their time, according to a Californian, sewing, embroidering, talking to the boys at every opportunity, and going to church.

The writer of this article was present at a reception in the Casa de la Guerra (Santa Barbara) in 1924 when at least a hundred of the descendants of our Spanish and Mexican pioneers were present — Vallejos, Carrillos, Alvarados, Lugos, de la Guerras, Ortigas, Elizaldes, Lataillades, Munras, Arrellanes, Bandinis, etc. Among these were Dona Maria Jimeno de Afata, and Mrs. Rebecca Ord Peshine, two daughters of Maria de las Angustias, sister of Pabloa de la Guerra.

When the Mexican orchestra began playing Mananitas (Little mornings of delight were those mornings when I began to love you) and the serenaders sang the words, the assembled guests, who had come in the costumes of Spanish California, were thrilled with delight by this simple melody which most of them had not heard for years. As the song died out a caballero took a guitar from a member of the orchestra and began another of the songs of Spanish California. His spirit was contagious—one after another of the guests joined him, and soon all were playing, singing, or humming with him. They were of the older generation, and as song followed song, the years dropped away, and they were living again in the days of their youth. Dancing followed—the dances of long ago—and Mrs. Ord Peshine, wearing a gown and some jewelry once belonging to her mother, danced with a Dr. Park the old waltz which, according to Richard Henry Dana's Two Years Before the Mast, her mother Dona Angustias had "danced so divinely" with Juan Bandini on the occasion of the marriage of her sister, Anita Maria, to Alfred Robinson. And these gracious people dreamed of the days, long since past, when clocks did not measure life, and more time was given to neighborly happiness—before the "Gringo" raised his flag on the Custom House at Monterey.

This was also the pattern of life of Old Monterey in '49, for the fathers, mothers, or relatives of many of the guests present at this reception were living in Monterey at the time of the constitutional convention. It was with similar songs and dances that the visiting delegates were entertained, although in the hearts of many Montereyans there was a resentment against these representatives of their conquerors. Yet, the spirit of hospitality and gracious living was inborn, and many Montereyans received the Americans into their homes and entertained them with their usual gracious hospitality.

The next and last article will tell of the convention and the en-

"Mind" is the subject of the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon for Sunday, August 21, with the Golden Text taken from Romans:
"Who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?" (11:34).

Included in the sermon are the following citations:

Exodus: "And God spake all these words, saying, I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me" (20:1-3).

"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." (Exodus xx. 3.)
The First Commandment is my favorite text. It demonstrates Christian Science. It inculcates the tri-unity of God, Spirit, Mind; it signifies that man shall have no other spirit or mind but God, eternal good, and that all men shall have one Mind" (p. 340).

New Centennial Show At The Gallery

BY HELEN PROSSER

Painting, it is said, reaches its highest aim when it carries us beyond painting, when it is not merely itself a creation, but makes the spectator creative, and prompts him with the antecedents and the consequents of the represented action.

If this is true there can be no doubt that all Peninsula art enthusiasts will be more than appreciative of the vivid beauty and charm of the Centennial Exhibit at the Carmel Art Gallery this month.

The paintings range from modern style to old master technique and embrace almost every medium and form of expression. The modern school is well represented. Patricia Cunningham's painting seems to stand out the moment you enter the gallery. The subject is that of a kneeling monk in which the oil medium is so loosely handled that it has almost a sketch-like quality, thus giving the painting a fine sensitive feeling, and yet creates drama and power in the subject.

Marjorie Doolittle's Whaling Station at Point Lobos has a fine quality, especially in her choice of color and its translucency.

Kathryn Aurner's Jones Incident has remarkable color combination, almost as the rainbow ranges in its prism hues. Dr. Aurner has done a great deal of research to re-create the scene so completely.

John Cunningham's painting is truly historical, picturing the three stages in early Californian advancement in the form of three portraits, Portola, Father Serra, Colton, very impressive on their single canvas.

Others in the same spirit are: Father Serra blessing the Indians by W. F. Freehoff, Baptism, Indians, at San Carlos Mission by Florence True, and Old Theater by Sophie Harpe.

Typical of romantic Spanish atmosphere is Sam Wainwright's Early Californian Romance. The richness of its moonlight setting is magnified only by the beauty of the exquisitely painted lovers in Spanish dress as they stand upon a flowered bank with the sweep of ocean and beach in the background. The location of this painting is on the Carmel Point approximately where Robinson Jeffers now has his home. This painting is one of the most truly Centennial paintings in the exhibit and yet is the type of painting one may always enjoy.

Armin Hansen's Landing of Father Serra is another fine historical painting which depicts the joy and holiness of the incident. The rich gold color of the sunrise is so intense it seems to carry beyond the picture and illuminate the entire wall around it.

Marjorie Schifferer has three fine pastels in this exhibit. Two of these are portraits. One Navajo Indian, complete with cut ear-lobe, where one of his three wives tore a earring in a sudden rage, and the other of a young Zuni child. Her third small pastel was originally only a sketch for a large painting but is quite complete in itself. Its subject is a bible lesson showing with sensitiveness the three ages of a Spanish woman.

Doris Ormsby, whose linoleum cuts bear the name of Daphne, exhibits a very lovely original depicting the misty outline of a galleon in the distance with a foreground of rock and flowers. The charming simplicity and beautiful subtle coloring of Doris Ormsby's pictures have a truly mystic quality and softness rarely found in a linoleum cut.

Wilhelm Ritschel's powerful seascape has all the great craftsmanship which made him the famous painter he was. The skill and beauty in his work always is a joy to behold.

Florence Lockwood is exhibiting a very fine portrait of an old Spaniard, Jose Botillier. There is much whimsy and thought in his face, and a twinkle in his eyes which makes you think he will move at any moment. Miss Lockwood has certainly achieved a skillful study here.

Frank Myers displays two oils very different from his usual style and subject. The first is a Toreador Dance with fine color and movement. In Cascaroni Ball he has also captured the rhythm and movement of a Spanish dance and the charm of the groups in the background watching the dancers has a quaintness all its own.

Other pictures are: Howard Smith's peaceful scene entitled, Spanish People; Armin Hansen's Gold Trek, Lester Baronda's Carmel Mission, Arthur Hill Gilbert's oil of General Sherman's Headquarters, Frank Moore's Ghost Town, Abel G. Warshawsky's lovely painting of the Carmel Mission, painted from an unusual position with the flower gardens in the foreground.

Spanish Lovers by Sam Harris is very beautiful with its deep tones. Thomas McGlynn's Ramon Reizd, E. Cashion, MacLennan's Ancient Adobe and Manila Galleon, E. J. F. Timmon's, Interior Carmel Mission, Catherine Seideneck's Figurine, Father Serra, with unusual technique and beauty, John Gratiot's Old Adobe, Warren Chase Merritt's Sir Francis Drake, John O'Shea's Mexicans at Market, Ferdinand Burgdorff's Old Customs House of Gold, and Burton Boudney's News of Gold and Golden Memory, Amador, are all notable.

All paintings are well worth viewing by visitors and local residents, too. Each exhibitor has

Goethe Instigated Ranger Naturalist System in Our Parks

C. M. Goethe was born in Sacramento (his father had come to California in the '60s) and studied law at the University of California. Later he managed the family bank in Sacramento. When he was eight years old his father used to send him out with the miners he grubstaked. It was during those early years around the campfires, sleeping in the open and listening to the last of the Argonauts' tales of California's gold rush, that Goethe drank in the material that resulted in over 100 Tales, historical or fictitious, about California's Gold Belt. He says that he felt a simple obligation to the children of tomorrow, so that he could not in good conscience withhold this colorful material.

The Ranger Naturalist movement, now well established in our national parks, was sponsored by C. M. Goethe. When he first became interested in nature guide work he made six trips to Europe, first to Switzerland, then to Norway and Holland, to France and to England, to study their working techniques. With the support and encouragement of Stephen T. Mather, the Borax king, he started the school for Ranger Naturalists in Yosemite, which is still going, and has been incorporated into our national park system.

Mr. Goethe and his wife were leaders in the National Park

movement. They, together with John Muir and Stephen Mather, were active in establishing the national parks and extending the boundaries of Yosemite and King's Canyon National Parks. Goethe, with his wife, interested themselves in the movement to create a national park in the Everglades. And he has been tireless in helping acquire additional lands for the redwood reserve.

Besides his Tales, Goethe wrote over 30 books covering a wide range of subjects. To name just a few: War Profits and Better Babies; Where Queen and Pope Fled; New Wine from Old Bottles; Bird Music for the Blind; Extinction of the Inca Highcastles; and Eugenic Aspects of Iceland's Conquest of Illiteracy.
